WARM REMINISCENCE

-MITHUN RAM

Mornings were longer again
Numbness overpowered the cold
Mind overflowing with static, behold
All he could do was wear a smile

An actor he was, taking after the hat
Finding the beauty in monochrome
Words of the silent era spoke
The language to his soul, vintage
He was saved, a crimson angel
A goddess in his presence
Whose departure brought forth winter
Her memory keeping him warm
His quest never drew closure
The treasure not his to keep

NAMING THE MONSTER

-ALLEN MATHEW

In the serene domain that descended,
I fabricated a monster in order to suffice my loneliness.
Finding a companion seemed oh so impasse
Hoping the monster I forged would pledge allegiance.
The fervent temper heaving instigated a fortifying flame within me.
Dread resolved into my soul, made my bones shudder.
Still could never commend enough the lone hours spent with my ego.
The monster I had been consciously living with,
I named it
